Greetings from the president of ICA

I am looking forward to our third Annual Conference with eager anticipation. The organization of our conferences is always an immense undertaking, but the National Archives of Iceland has risen splendidly to the challenge. In terms of population Iceland is a small country but it is greatly respected in the archival world. It provides a splendid setting for our conference: a country with spectacular scenery, a rich historical tradition, and a determination to modernize.

I congratulate the hosts, who have been working closely with the ICA Secretariat for well over a year, on putting together such an attractive programme on topical themes that are relevant to all archivists throughout the world wherever they work. I am confident that all participants will find the programme informative and thought-provoking, and that they will return home with renewed confidence in the future of the archival profession.

Salutations du président de l'ICA

Je me réjouis de notre troisième Conférence annuelle avec beaucoup d'impatience. L'élaboration de nos conférences est toujours une entreprise immense, un défi que les Archives nationales islandaises ont relevé brillamment. En termes de population l'Islande est un petit pays. Il est toutefois très respecté dans le monde des archives. Il offre un cadre splendide pour notre conférence : des paysages spectaculaires, de riches traditions historiques et une profonde volonté de modernisation.

Je souhaite féliciter nos hôtes, qui travaillent étroitement avec le secrétariat de l'ICA depuis plus d'un an en vue de mettre sur pied un programme alléchant autour de thématiques d'actualité pertinentes pour tous les archivistes du monde, quel que soit leur environnement professionnel. Je suis convaincu que tous les participants trouveront notre programme informatif et stimulant, et qu'ils rentreront avec une confiance renouvelée en l'avenir de notre profession.

The National Archives of Iceland

The National Archives of Iceland holds and conserves more than 44 km of archival documents. Documents concerning the Icelandic administrative history are the main core of the archive and they date from the present back to the 12th century. Also the individual stories of institutions, businesses, politicians and private individuals who have entrusted their archives to the National Archives are preserved in the archives repository.

Established on April 3rd 1882, The National Archives have a history dating back further than the modern Icelandic republic, independent from Denmark in 1944. At the beginning the archive consisted of a few boxes of documents of archival materials that had accumulated in various government departments, stored in the loft of the cathedral in Reykjavik. In 1908 a new Archives and Library building made it possible for the archive to grow and collect documents from public offices more systematically. In 1928 the Danish government handed over the majority of the archival collections concerning Icelandic matters. At the turn of the 20th century the archive moved to the current location, where modern repositories are continuously being installed to accommodate the growing archives of Icelandic history.

The archives are now a modern administrative institution with a staff of 30 consisting of specialists with a variety of competence. Historians, librarians and information technology experts focus on providing excellent service to the archives users, both official offices and individuals. Today the emphasis is on access, making the archive catalogues and the most popular archive material available digitally and online on the archives own website as well as international archive portals.

Les Archives nationales islandaises

Les Archives nationales islandaises stockent et conservent plus de 44 km de documents archivistiques. Les documents se rapportant à l'histoire administrative de l'Islande constituent l'essentiel des archives et remontent jusqu'au XI<sup>e</sup> siècle. Les histoires individuelles d'institutions, de sociétés, de politiciens et de personnes privées ayant légué leurs archives aux Archives nationales y sont également préservées.

L'histoire des Archives nationales islandaises, établies le 3 avril 1882, remonte plus loin que la république islandaise moderne, qui a obtenu son indépendance du Danemark en 1944. Au départ, les archives ne comportaient que quelques boîtes de fonds d'archives qui s'étaient accumulées dans divers départements gouvernementaux, stockées dans les combles de la cathédrale de Reykjavik.

En 1908, un nouveau bâtiment consacré aux Archives et à la Bibliothèque permit aux Archives de se développer, facilitant le rassemblement de documents issus d'administrations. En 1928, le gouvernement danois transféra la plupart des collections d'archives se rapportant aux affaires islandaises. Au tournant du siècle dernier, les Archives s'installèrent dans leur emplacement actuel, où des dépôts modernes sont régulièrement établis pour accueillir les archives sans cesse plus volumineuses de l'histoire islandaise.

Les Archives constituent désormais une institution administrative moderne, représentée par un personnel de 30 spécialistes disposant de nombreuses compétences. Historiens, bibliothécaires et experts des technologies de l'information offrent un excellent service aux utilisateurs d'archives, qu'il s'agisse de bureaux officiels ou de personnes privées. À l'heure actuelle, l'attention est centrée sur l'accès, sur le fait de rendre accessibles les catalogues et documents d'archives les plus appréciés sous forme numérique, en ligne sur le site Web des Archives, ainsi que sur des portails d'archives internationaux.
